In a recent study:

25% of bulk soap systems were contaminated with bacteria.

A recent study[1] conducted by microbiologists at the University of Arizona found that 25% of bulk soap systems (like the kind you refill from a gallon bottle) contained potentially harmful bacteria. Fecal-based organisms were found in 16% of the samples. Using contaminated soap could actually place germs on hands while people are trying to get clean.

Is it worth the risk?
